But he did not marry the couple, because the young lady wanted him to return the marriage license as soon as the ceremony was performed. She did not want the marriage made public, but wished to conceal it. Mr. Clark, with heroic energy, then repaired to Justice Hall, who compiled with the wish of the lady and married them. The couple then went back to the hotel, and the license was left in charge of the hondsome young clerk. The young bridegroom drove his young wife to her brother-in-law's residence in the city, and leaving her there, returned to the hotel, where he slept by himself during the night. Yes-terday he went about town as if he had never been married, and dined with his wife's brother, who knew nothing of the marriage. Later in the afternoon it was reported that the brother and two kinsmen were said to be on the lookout for Mr. Clark, toward whom they entertained no very pleasant feelings, upon learning that he had secretly married the young lady, who is of one of the wealthiest and most esteemed families in Tipton county. Mr. Clark, however, is not a county. Mr. Clark, however, is not a scary man, and was seen at the Central Hotel very late yesterday evening. It was reported that the young wife had filed a petition for a divorce in one of our courts, but while this strange conduct cannot well be conjectured, much less avalained, we give the above facts as lass explained, we give the above facts as we have been informed, suppressing the name of the young lady at the instance of acquaintances, and through courtesy due the feelings of her relatives, whom we understand are very much grieved at the result of her attachment to Mr. the result of her attachment to Mr. Clark. The young lady has been engaged two years to a young man well known in Memphis, but now a resident of Arkansas. Her mother opposed his suit, and now her daughter has married Mr. Clark.—[Memphis Appeal.

New Applications of Papes.—Singularly enough, the Iron Age argues that paper is to become the general if not universal substitute for wood, leather the paper is to some extent. paper is to become the growth paper is to become the growth and india-rubber, as also, to some extent, for copper, tin and zine, and that even iron is not adapted to uses so widely various—it being practicable, indeed, to bring paper pulp to such a state of toughness and solidity by pressure, as to be almost as fire-proof and indestructible as iron, and thus our railroad cars may be made of paper, instead of iron, thereby preventing the dangers now incurred in case of accidents. It is claimed that in proportion to weight paper is probably the strongest material of construction known, combining more perfectly than any other substance the qualities of strength, lightness, flexibility, durability and cheapness. So many and various, too, are the articles of which it can be and cheapness. So many and various, too, are the articles of which it can be made that it can be manufactured in quantities practically unlimited in e-civilized country, and so long as pl continue to grow, paper manufacture can be sustained. It is also, under all cirbe sustained. It is also, under all cir-cumstances, an easy material to work and handle. The fact is probably well known that the paper wheels which have been used with such success on some of the palace cars are formed of compressed paper fitted into a steel tire; iron plates are then adapted to each side of the paper, and bolted together to prevent any displacement of the filling.

SECOND LOVE.—The Charleston (S.C.)
Courier and News, which occasionally touches upon queer topics in a quaint sort of way, inquires why it should be a reproach to be called a second-handed swain, and goes on as follows: "That title is a patent of nobility—a token that the possessor is desperately in carness. It is a sign of courage, a proof to pages verence. Nor can it be said that new
